

TOWN TALK.

Isn't it funny? The thermometer is down 20 degrees from what it was this time last week. Everything is lovely, and cooling drinks, ice cream, etc., are at a discount, which is fortunate for the impoverished condition of our "bloods." We feel that the sultry summer is checked, and the meridian sun most gently smiling with attenuated beams, sheds gently down a mild and grateful warmth. Farmers, merchants, and buyers, and in fact every one are feeling in anticipation the pleasure of peace and plenty.

The school crop is coming in pretty freely, and the yield is much larger than usual. Farmers are now paying $2.00 per bushel. Let our farmers lose no time in sending their wheat to market. Holding back for a higher price almost invariably results in loss to the holder. The corn crop in this section generally looks tolerably well, notwithstanding from almost everywhere the alarm is given of "great drouth." It needs rain badly, and the dry weather, which has been most acceptable for wheat has been seriously injurious to corn, and we are advised not to let it be properly cultivated. An old farmer says that "the drive the ground, the more work," and that if the ground is kept well stirred, corn can thrive with very little rain. It is an old saying with farmers that "good crops never fail to follow a dry June." An agricultural friend hands us the following: "Corn sends out long roots in search of sustenance. While the ground should be broken up as deeply as the plow can be driven and drawn, the surface should afterward be well stirred, that the dew may be the more readily penetrated, and fulfill their mission, and not as too frequently the case, be absorbed by the next day's sunshine, having found a dry crust intercepting them from the feelers of the plant struggling in every direction in search of food, far below the surface. Nor should the exploded notion prevail of crowding the earth around the stalk. The first set of roots or squire being covered up will be succeeded by a second set. It is an instinct of the plant to support the weight of ears under which with proper culture, is sure to bend. Hoeing is too slow work for a cornfield and requires too many hands. A cultivator or a shovel plow, well handled will answer every purpose, and keep the ground in proper condition."

Married in Deatur, Texas, May 21st, 1898, Capt. Wm. M. McConnell, formerly of Fulton county, Ky., to Miss Martha Volentine, formerly of Weakley county, Tenn.

With our old friend Bill McConnell, unaltered like forever, and may time bestow upon him and his new joy.

In this locality, marriages have been anxiously suspended, owing probably to the summer weather, or because meal, flour, vegetables, willow baskets, and other things likely to be needed in such quantities are too high. We know of one who has been married on the "sea," speaking of "live on love," that are now struggling desperately with the waves and crying lustily, in the language of one of Shakespeare's enemies, "Alas, my Cash is out, I think."

The ladies of Louisville have organized a literary club, to be styled, "The Chatting Club," the object of which is not to discuss the sorrows and rights of woman, but to fit themselves for acting well their parts as sweethearts and wives. We suppose it is their intention to extend this charming organization over the entire States, and we trust our Hickman ladies will at once apply for a charter. Perhaps under the influence of this institution the false education as to marriage so prevalent may be enlightened, and instead of marrying for riches and to "live in style," we shall have a type of the higher, diviner marriage of souls. A realization of that state of purity and beauty, in which lives, through an abiding love, are refined and consecrated, and blest into one—beings moulded into one by high spiritual affinities and exalted mental attractions.

OUR BOYS.—A hint to the parents of Hickman relative to the habits of some of their sons can but be acceptable. Some of our parents do not suspect it, are in the habit of spending their nights in town rollicking around. Nothing is more dangerous, ruinous and mischievous, or more surely marks their course downward. In these night rollicks they acquire the inclination for becoming rowdy, dissolute men. If they will drink let them do so in day light, and not have the shadows of night to guard their timid steps into the ruin.

It is a grievous error of our community that we so easily neglect our school duties. Our teachers appear content with a half intelligence, derived from the dull, slow work of primer and spelling class, and our heads of families exhibit a half intelligence to the detriment of good schools, up to all complimentary to their enlightenment. Few country neighbors but that are honest and better educated than our proud little city. Education stands first in importance towards the progress of our country and community, and we must not let our worthy school committee appreciate this fact, as we ever get furnished, unless it is a mere form, held forth for citizen ship from abroad. We are satisfied that it is the most earnest desire of all to see our town filled up with a good, useful and working population, and to this end good schools are of vast importance. It is useless to tell the father of a family about the richness of our soil, our river and railroad advantages, the great need of labor and the high prices paid therefor, if we do not have the means to educate his children. We mean to be persistent in the schools already in existence, but aim only at their improvement, and refer to their inferiority only as comparative to the institutions we should have. Because of this inferiority of schools, fathers with children to educate, must go where there are good schools. How can we expect persons to leave or pass by places, where they can educate their children, to come to a town like this, with all its acknowledged advantages, where such opportunities of education are withheld. The great mistake of our town is that we are not united in this purpose. We have home patronage sufficient to sustain such schools, if it could be united, and our interest as a town and people should enforce this union. Every year a number of our sons and daughters are forced to seek distant institutions in which to receive their education. An old citizen estimates that these students sent abroad together with our younger scholars are ample to sustain two good colleges. If these parents could be induced to advance the money at home that they have to advance abroad, we could establish such schools as would be a pride and blessing to us. If a person will calculate the interest involved the idea will appear feasible and attainable. If some teacher, of enterprise and small capital, could be induced to lead in a move to erect a college here, we are confident he would receive substantial assistance. Our little and inferior schools can only be crushed out by superior and better ones.

While our worthy City Council are not at present engaged in any very important legislation, we must congratulate them upon the considerate tone of their work. They are exhibiting a wise and prudent economy, making no new appropriations, curtailing expenses, and striving to pay off of the City's indebtedness. We trust this economical position is not the result of the present depleted condition of the treasury. We thank them for these suggestions to the Council as to city affairs have not fallen heedlessly upon their ears. A contract has been let for enclosing our city graveyard with a substantial plank fence, and a new and better road leading to the hallowed spot has been opened. Negotiations have been going on relative to the establishment of a market house, but we regret to say, have so far not been successful. A compromise has been effected relative to the vexatious wharfage question, by which the city is freed from a long, tedious, and doubtful law suit. These actions and others, so far down as the dog law, are certainly wise and commendable. Upon the question of city bonds, the Council yet adheres to its position. We have no desire to continue the discussion of the subject now, but at another time, when our arguments may be effective with the voters of the city, we may be heard from. In this we fear the Council are like the little boy who could not be persuaded from the apple tree by kind words, but had to be pulled down with stones.

The regular election for city Marshal will occur the 1st Monday in August. We are authorized now to announce Mr. James P. Cheatham, as a candidate for the position. Mr. C. is a worthy and good citizen, sober, discreet, responsible, and would make an excellent Marshal.

We can but sympathize with our contemporaries of the larger cities, who are now occupying column after column in favor of enlarging, improving and beautifying their "City Parks." How blessed are we whom Nature has provided so magnificently with pleasure grounds, where we can have an airing, pic-nics, frolics, and dances upon the green, with out tax to our city, and without obligation to the liberality of any of our capitalists. So few of us appreciate the blessing, the grand and beautiful privilege. Heaven has enriched us with healthy surroundings, where we can retire and breathe the pure air, where bright fountains bubble, where shady groves invite, and where stretched upon the shady grass, we can view the lovely scenery, ventilate our wallet of cares and troubles, for the time being unbind the brow, and rest the mind of busy life, and rest and drink in new inspiration to meet the coming cares of the morrow. Who would exchange these pure joys for the dust, the heat, the smog, the turmoil and noise of the city?

The N. & N. W. Railroad is yet suspended, and we know of no immediate prospect of the resumption of trains. The annual meeting of stockholders has been postponed until the 22d of July, and it is not supposed that any arrangement for running the road can be effected before that time. Gov. Brownlow has decided positively not to issue the bonds in dispute any one until the Federal court relieves him of the injunction granted against him. To consequences of the stoppage of the cars we have been deprived of our daily mails, which we understand to be on account of a misunderstanding between the officials. The stoppage of the mails, in the first place, was caused by Receiver Innis. The strikers, however, wanted to dictate to him as to what engineer he should send out. Afterwards both sides expressed themselves opposed to running the mail cars. The military was called into requisition, but one side or the other, succeeded in burning a bridge near Nashville. The mail agents deserve great credit for their exertions to renew mail service, but from Mr. McCluskey we learn, that there is no prospect of their efforts succeeding until the difficulty on the road is settled.
